

Nathalie Djurberg and Hans Berg

One Last Trip to the Underworld

November 1 – December 20, 2019

Tanya Bonakdar Gallery is pleased to announce One Last Trip to the Underworld, Nathalie Djurberg and Hans Berg's first exhibition with the gallery, on view at our New York City location November 1 – December 20, 2019.

Spanning both of the gallery's floors, this much anticipated show will be Nathalie Djurberg and Hans Berg's first solo exhibition in New York since 2013 and will be the worldwide premiere of four new video works.

Djurberg and Berg's collaborative works conjure surreal landscapes that explore the shadows of human subconsciousness. Using sculpture, stop-motion film, sound, and immersive installation the artists construct narratives that speck to emotional tension, confliction, sexual impulse, and violence.

Rendered through dark humor, with a hint of the absurd, Djurberg and Berg's work explores an emotional gamut of fear, innocence, power, greed, and shame. The formal qualities of the work—seductive colors, visceral textures and hypnotic music—enhance the emotional dimension and challenge our way of seeing. In dissolving our perspective of morality and bias, Djurberg and Berg invite the viewer to consider our own fears and fantasies.

For this exhibition, the artists utilize the gallery space to create an environment in which the subconscious pervades, heaven and hell merge and distinctions between beauty and grotesque are blurred. The four new films on view: One Last Trip to the Underworld, This is Heaven, Damaged Goods and How to Slay a Demon, explore themes of needing, longing, and personal evolution and regression. Throughout the gallery, large scale sculptures of birds perched on flowers create a forest-like landscape- sumptuous formations in vivid colors, which bring the animations to life and into real space. Experienced together, the totality of the environment takes the viewer to and from the depths of a dark underworld, speaking to our most inner conceptions of pleasure, pain, longing, and lust.

In creating all-encompassing environments where film, sculpture, and installation inform and activated one another, Djurberg and Berg's work excavates the subliminal and brings to the surface the most repressed, primordial human drives. In an enthralling dynamic of magnetic attraction and aversion the artists' work invoke psychological and corporal effects that push the limits of the human psyche to new frontiers.

For the past decade Nathalie Djurberg and Hans Berg have developed a robust visual and sonar lexicon to create a body of work that mines the intersections of anxiety and desire, trauma and satisfaction, repression, lust and power.

The artists' collaborations have been exhibited widely around the world. In 2009, Djurberg & Berg presented their installation The Experiment at the 53rd Venice Biennial Making Worlds curated by Daniel Birnbaum where they were awarded the Silver Lion for Best Emerging Artists. They also received the Cairo Biennale Prize at the International Cairo Biennale in 2010 and the Premio Pino Pascali Award in 2012. Other important solo presentations include Kunsthalle Winterthur, Switzerland (2007); Fondazione Prada, Milan (2008); Hammer Museum, Los Angeles (2008); OMA Prada Transformer, Seoul (2009); Natural History Museum, Basel (2010); Wexner Center for the Arts, Columbus, Ohio (2011); Museum Boijmans Van Beuningen, Rotterdam (2011); Camden Arts Center, London (2011); Walker Art Center, Minneapolis and New Museum, New York (2012); Garage Center for Contemporary Culture, Moscow, Russia (2013); ARoS Aarhus Kunstmuseum, Aarhus, Denmark (2015); Sammlung Goetz, Munich, Germany (2015); Minsheng Art Museum, Shanghai, China (2016); Stavanger Art Museum (MUST), Norway (2017); Moderna Museet, Stockholm, Sweden (2018); Baltimore Museum of Art, Baltimore, Maryland (2019), among others.
