Arnulf Rainer too began his dealings with the human body by using his own. In his Photographic series of the 60ies he appears as model himself, creating series like "Körpersprache" (1967 - 1969). In his subsequent actions, in the 70ies he avoids the actual physical body and moves his work to a meia level. While in the series "Face Farces" and "Body Poses" he photographed himself, he resorts to found picture material when examining the idea of femininity. He uses photographs and reproductions from th nineteenth and twentieth centuries, among them pictures from a wide range of social meilicus of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries and fifties, and owns up to his preference for acrobats, respectively contortionists. " The photos of the snake women touched me so much that I intervened by way of various graphic corrections and treid to transform these unique performances into picture blossoms. This was the first deliberate step away from using myself towards using ladies as dummies for the overpaintings", Rainer explained in 1988.
