David Zwirner is pleased to present After-Hours: People Who Work Here on view at the gallery's West 19th Street space. The exhibition brings together sixty-three artists from multiple departments across the gallery's global locations, presenting a vast range of media, including painting, drawing, photography, printmaking, textile work, installation, video, sound, and sculpture. This exhibition marks the third and largest iteration of the People Who Work Here series, which showcases the work of artists on staff at the gallery and debuted in 2012.

The artists featured in After-Hours interweave their creative practices with their day-to-day roles at the gallery, opening a portal between these parallel types of labor. The exhibition explores the exchange of energy between being an artist and an arts worker, laying bare the vibrant collaborative ecosystem of the contemporary art world.

All proceeds from this exhibition directly benefit the artists.

After-Hours: People Who Work Here is curated by gallery staff members Grace Paola Halio, Jessica Palinski Hoos, and Haley Darya Parsa.
