

MATTHEW MARKS GALLERY

523 West 24th Street, New York, New York 10011 Tel: 212-243-0200 matthewmarks.com

PRESS RELEASE

Alex Da Corte: Parade

November 7 to December 20, 2025

Opening: Thursday, November 6, 6:00 to 8:00 PM

Matthew Marks is pleased to announce Alex Da Corte: Parade, the next exhibition in his galleries at 522 & 526 West 22nd Street. The exhibition includes twelve new sculptures presented in a narrative environment. It is the artist's first one-person exhibition in New York in more than five years.

Alex Da Corte is known for his work that explores the nuances of contemporary life through a masterful layering of images drawn from popular culture, art history, and modern design. Though his expansive practice includes video, performance, painting, and drawing, this exhibition focuses on sculpture, which Da Corte finds to be the foundation of all his work: "I like to think I favor sculpture because, unlike painting or photography, it has a side you cannot see. And that is uniquely human."

The main gallery is divided into three chambers, a procession from external to internal separated by thresholds of art history. Da Corte appears three times as life-size sculptures. In one, he is the Pink Panther as a house painter, complete with a drop cloth, bucket, and roller, in the process of painting the gallery pink. In another, he is Popeye sitting atop a brick piano with his feet resting on the keys, contemplating a pumpkin. "The need to dress ourselves up is something common, like the need to eat," Da Corte has noted of his career-long use of costume, quotation, and disguise as an avenue to explore the depths of human experience. "There's a shared blank canvas that we all have."

Da Corte appears for a third time inside a recreation of Paul Thek's The Tomb, which was first exhibited at the Stable Gallery in New York in 1967. Considered one of the great lost artworks of our time, this meticulously researched, comprehensive installation features Da Corte as a figure lying in repose inside a pink ziggurat. Like Thek, Da Corte cast his own body to make the sculpture. "So many of my works ruminate on the poetry of living and dying and a certain balance of joy and sadness," Da Corte states, reflecting on the complexity and worth of elegy.

An illustrated publication with an extensive conversation between Da Corte and curator Elisabeth Sussman will accompany the exhibition.

Alex Da Corte (b. 1980) was born in Camden, New Jersey, and lives and works in Philadelphia. His work has been the subject of one-person museum exhibitions at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, Modern Art Museum of Fort Worth, Secession in Vienna, the 21st Century Museum of Contemporary Art in Kanazawa, Japan, Fondazione Prada in Milan, Glenstone in Potomac, Maryland, and the Louisiana Museum of Modern Art in Denmark, among others.

Alex Da Corte: Parade is on view at 522 & 526 West 22nd Street from November 7 to December 20, 2025, Tuesday through Saturday, from 10:00 AM to 6:00 PM.

For additional information please call 212-243-0200 or email inquiries@matthewmarks.com.