So sweet some day*

-Ida Ekblad

«While I'll admit to feeling a thrill at the evidence of a woman welding and making large-format, expressive paintings, Ekblad's eclecticism shows her to be an equal-opportunity scavenger.»

Chloe Stead in Frieze magazine

Galerie Max Hetzler is pleased to announce the second solo exhibition of Ida Ekblad in France which will feature new works.

Ida Ekblad's practice incorporates painting and sculpture but also poetry, filmmaking and performance. The Norwegian artist has collaborated with multiple artists and musicians. Her sources of inspiration include artist figures such as Odilon Redon, Joy Orbison, Lina Bo Bardi, the acting of Gena Rowlands and the writing of Haldis Moren Vesaas and Inger Hagerup.

Her high-energy paintings are superabundant, retinal, corporal, pushy and highlight trends and techniques often seen as outdated or even tacky such as puffy paint, rose pattern kitchen towels, run-of-the-mill graffiti, steam punk, b-girl aesthetic or airbrushing. Colours work as both decor and aggressor, forced onto the canvas and combined with the mysterious and druggy poetry of her titles.

A sense of freedom exudes from the vibrant work of Ekblad who dislikes to plan, organise, rationalise or iron things out. Ekblad rather looks for «hunchy» moments of peak eyes, peak ears, peak everything when working.

Ida Ekblad's work is currently presented at the Venice Biennale as part of University of Disaster at the National Pavilion of Bosnia and Herzegovina. Ekblad will also present a sculpture during FIAAC as part of the On Site programme. She is the initiator and director of the artist run space SCHLOSS in Oslo.
